Huey, Dewie and Louie are a trio of kittens who are very nervous and will take some time to settle into a home environment and come out of their shells. They can be rehomed separately, together, or as a pair and a single. They are not enjoying cattery life and spend a lot of time hiding in their cat tower together. When they are hiding they will tolerate being stroked and brushed, but it is clear they are not comfortable with this yet.

They will also tolerate being picked up but they wriggle and try to get away. They are really looking for quiet homes with patient owners who will give them the time they need to grow in confidence and learn to trust people. It is likely that they will spend several weeks or even months hiding and gradually learning to trust and growing in confidence so it is important that potential adopters understand this and are willing to give them lots of time to come round. These kittens have the potential to turn into loving cats given the right environment, plenty of time and space, and lots of positive socialisation.

They can live with children aged 16+.
